OVER 5000 TROOPS TO BE IN CAMP

WILL ARRIVE AUG. 3. ARTILLERY COMING AUG. 8.

Train of 47 Cars Needed to Carry 182nd Artillery.

More than 5,000 officers and men of the Michigan National Guard will be moved from their home stations to the Hanson State Military reservation, near Grayling, where they will receive their summer training, in less than 24 hours. This is considered a big achievement in moving so many troops with their equipment and baggage in times of peace.

General Guy M. Wilson, commanding officer of the Sixty-third Infantry brigade, and acting commanding officer of the Thirty-second division, and commanding officer of the camp at Grayling, his staff, state corps staff and departments, and all other officers and individuals ordered to camp not included in the movement of troops, will leave their homes so as to arrive in camp not later than 5 p. m., August 3. The camp will open at sunrise August 4 and will continue until August 22, when the artillery regiment leave for their home stations. It will require a train of 47 cars and coaches to transport the 182nd Field artillery from Detroit to Grayling when it sets forth for its first annual field encampment. The regiment under the command of Colonel Heinrich Pickert will entrain on the Michigan Central tracks at Kirby and Twelfth streets the evening of August 7 and will return from Grayling August 22.

Colonel Pickert has received word from the commanding officer at Grayling to the effect that this regiment has been assigned quarters at the east end of the cantonment, and this news was received with great enthusiasm by the local command because of the fact that this considered a most choice regimental area. On the one side it is very convenient to the station, while only its parade grounds separates the quarters of the officers and men from the beautiful Portage lake.

What a relief it is to find a man who, when you tell him what you want done, goes ahead and does it.

PROFITS IN FARMING

Our Troubles.

Buck Up—Fight 'Em to a Finish. (Another short chapter on the alluring topic, "Science and the Farmer.")

Rats.

It may make certain people smile rather contemptuously when they read this heading on a very familiar and to some a commonplace subject. Nevertheless I have no hesitation or shame in devoting this entire issue of Farm Bureau Notes to the subject of Freeing Our Premises of Rats, for rats do two hundred million dollars worth of damage to produce and property each year in the United States.

Right Here At Home.

Probably there are few Crawford County farmers who are not greatly annoyed by rats catching young chickens, stealing grain, and food, and gnawing and digging everywhere. A lot of these losses can be reduced or stopped if we all try. When left undisturbed in its chosen abode, the rat increases with almost unbelievable rapidity, and uses unceasingly its highly developed instincts at the ever increasing expense of the housekeeper, farmer, or business establishment harboring it.

How To Do It.

It has been found in the experience of investigators and demonstrators of the Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture that a few simple measures, consistently employed will rid a farm or community of rats.

Rats can not long survive a steady campaign against them.

Failures to get rid of them is due partly to poor methods, but more to people quitting too soon.

Get Rid of Their Food and Shelter.

Most important means of eliminating rat food and shelter are to store foodstuffs in rat-proof containers, to dispose of waste in tightly covered vessels, and to prevent accumulation of trash and refuse.

Lack of food and shelter reduce breeding rate of rats, and increased hunger makes poisoning and trapping easier.

Poisoning.

The best means of the Department of Agriculture has found for destroying rats is by poisoning, and poison is recommended wherever it can be used safely.

Powdered Barium Carbonate. The best rat poison yet found by the Department of Agriculture is Powdered Barium Carbonate.

Inquiry at Grayling drug stores shows that this rat poison can be had there at a few cents an ounce.

It is odorless and tasteless. Rat baits containing it are readily eaten by the rats.

It is slow in its action, so that rats affected by it have time to leave the premises in search of water or to return to their holes before they die.

How to Bait Rats.

A variety of baits used separately not only gives the rats a choice of foods, but tends to make it less suspicious. Baits should be fresh and preferably of good quality.

Recommended Baits.

Hamburg steak, sausage, fish, liver, bacon, cheese, thin slices of muskmelon, apple, tomato, or cucumber, canned corn, squash or pumpkin seeds, mashed banana, boiled carrot, rolled oats, bread, corn meal, flour or cake.

How to Bait Rats.

Powdered Barium Carbonate should be thoroughly mixed and worked into soft baits in proportion of one part of the poison to four parts of the selected food.

Add water when necessary to make baits moist.

Baits moistened until like soft mush are liked very much by rats in dry weather.

With sliced baits, sift Barium Carbonate over them and rub well in with fingers or knife.

Have slices thin, and slightly moistened if necessary.

How to Distribute Rat Poison.

A teaspoonful of each of the three or more kinds of bait should be exposed in places frequented by rats.

In buildings, baits should be set on strips of paper or boards where they may be easily removed.

Another Good Way. Place a teaspoonful of prepared bait in each of several small paper sacks, and drop them in places frequented by rats or where rats can get at them. Close sack by twisting the top. Bait distributed in this way seems to make the rat less suspicious.

It is better not to place sacks in or near rat holes, but to drop them promiscuously about.

The sacks are usually carried into burrows or behind objects where the contents are eaten in comfort and are more nearly consumed than in the open.

In public places, where there is any possibility that bait will be disturbed by people, sacks should be labeled POISON.

Several Kinds.

Baits of three or more kinds should be exposed in groups. Where rats are abundant, baits must be exposed at intervals of 10 to 20 feet.

Unused baits should be picked up the following morning and burned.

If left exposed in warm places more than one day, the baits will sour and the resulting acid will gradually change the Barium into a bitter and highly objectionable form.

Continue to distribute fresh baits in less quantity each night, repeating those that are freely eaten, and put that kind in place of those rats do not seem to like.

A Trick on the Rats.

In stubborn cases it may be necessary to put out unpoisoned food or fresh foods every night until rats take them freely, then substitute the poisoned bait.

In Poultry Houses or Yards. Poison exposed in poultry inclosures should be put where chickens can not get at them—as behind or under boxes, and it should be very wet, or of such a nature that rats cannot drag it out where chickens can pick it.

Caution—Be Careful. Barium Carbonate is a relatively mild poison, but the danger from accidents cannot be emphasized too much. Keep it out of the reach of children and irresponsible persons, and from domestic animals and fowls.

Remedy—Antidote.

The remedy if a person is poisoned by Barium Carbonate is to give mustard or salt dissolved in warm water, or to make the person vomit by sticking the finger in the back of the throat. Follow vomiting with a liberal dose of Epsom salts or Glauber salts.

The Cat and the Rat.

It is a good thing to raise a vigorous cat entirely in the home. Keep her there. Feed her there. Don't let her go to the house to lie around. Don't let children make a pet of her. She will probably catch some rats.

Oh You Trappers!

Even though cat and bait are used, keep the trap going. Set the trigger so that it will release the spring

GRAYLING CREAMERY CHANGES HANDS

JAS. McDONNELL SELLS PLANT TO HENRY W. KLEIN.

James McDonnell has sold his creamery, known as the Grayling Dairy Products market, to Henry W. Klein of this city. The deal was made Tuesday.

Mr. McDonnell says that he had to give up the work because of the confinement and also not being able to endure working upon cement floors.

This was very much of a surprise to the friends of Mr. McDonnell, and it will be with deep regret that we lose Mr. McDonnell from among the business men.

Mr. Klein has been working at the flooring factory for some time and is no total stranger to the people of Grayling. Before coming to Grayling he was employed in the creamery industry at Lemont, Ill., a dairy station near Chicago. He is an experienced creamery man, and says that he intends to give the people of Grayling good products and good service.

We are sure that everyone will agree that the Creamery has been a wonderful convenience to the people of Grayling. Before it was established it was oftentimes impossible to get milk and cream in many families.

Even with small children, had to go without these essential articles. Now one can go there at almost any time and get all the milk and cream they want. Hundreds of families have found this a wonderful convenience.

Besides milk and cream they had on sale at almost all times, ice cream, fresh butter, buttermilk and delicious cottage cheese.

We hope Mr. Klein will make a good success of this business so that we may be assured of this convenience continually. There is little danger of its closing up if the home people will give it their support.

Grayling butter is sold in nearly all groceries; ask your dealer for Grayling made butter. Also ask for Grayling made ice cream—IXL brand. You may buy this at the creamery or at the following places: Shepperson Inn, Cody Hotel, LaMotte, Kesseler and H. Hanson lunch rooms. This is the purest cream sold in Grayling, says Mr. McDonnell.

at a very slight touch. Large triggers are better than small ones.

In trapping, as in poisoning, the kind of bait is of great importance. It is best to give the rat a choice of food.

To get best results from trapping, use rolled oats, fried bacon, bread, and toasted cheese. Baits that easily stick to the trigger, like fried bacon, raw or cooked meat, fish, nut meats, cheese, apples or carrots are best.

Where to Set Traps. Best place to set traps is close to walls, behind things, in dark corners anywhere that a rat in trying to hide would run.

Traps should be so set that the rat, in following its natural course, will pass right over the trigger.

On ground, sink trap slightly below ground level, and place small pieces of cloth or paper over trigger, and cover whole thing lightly with the earth or sawdust.

On hard floors, bury trap in shallow pan of meal, sawdust or grain.

New Use for Your Auto. The exhaust from an automobile, tractor, or other gasoline engine can be directed into a rat hole by a piece of hose.

Adjust carburetor to give a rich mixture. Let engine run at moderate speed ten minutes or more.

Naphthalene Flakes. In seed warehouses and granaries where sacked grain is stored temporarily, or otherwise, it has been found that a liberal supply of Flaked Naphthalene, scattered on floor, about stacked grain and over bags, will keep rats away.

Rat-Proof Cement. Build rat-proof, of cement, as much as possible.

Twenty Years Ago—I Remember. Eggs were ten cents a dozen, milk was five cents a quart; the butcher gave the liver away, the hired girl received a dollar a week and did the washing. Women did not powder and paint (in public), play poker or shake the shimmy, and they were taught to cook at the age of three.

Men wore whiskers and boots; chewed tobacco; spit on the sidewalks; and cussed. Laborers worked ten hours a day and never went on strike. No tips were given to waiters and the flat-check-grafter was unknown.

No one was ever operated on for appendicitis; microbes were unheard of; folks lived to a good old age, and every year went miles to wish their friends a Merry Christmas.

Today—You Know. Everybody rides in automobiles (or Fords); plays the piano with his feet; goes to see Charlie Chaplin; smokes cigarettes; drinks hair tonic; blames the H. C. L. on the Democrats; never goes to bed the same day he gets up; and thinks he's having a heck of a time.

These are the days of Suffragette, profiteering, Prohibition; and life is worth living.

POTATOES FOR SALE. Some good old potatoes, better than new ones. If ten or more bushels are wanted will deliver; if less, come and get them. Andrew Mortenson, Route 1, Grayling, Mich.

Opportunity knocks but once—people are not so considerate.

CHEMICAL PLANT TO BE DISMANTLED.

H. Helmer of the firm of Helper & Clinkofstine, junk dealers of Bay City, was in the city last of the week and purchased the turpentine plant located near the du Pont plant, that was owned by the Grayling Wood Products company. Mr. Helmer says that some of the equipment may be resold but the large portion will be put into scrap metal. The building material consisting of wood, brick and steel will be offered for sale.

This plant was instituted in the year 1912. It was capitalized for $50,000. It was originally intended for the manufacture of wood alcohol, acetates, charcoal, wood oils, tar, etc. The plant was installed by L. K. Harris of Detroit, and, altho some of these products were manufactured, there seemed to be no market for them at that time and after a brief duration of operation the plant was closed down and has never again been operated. Efforts have been made to get the establishment in operation again but failed. That seems to have been the fate of just about every turpentine plant that has been started in Michigan. This one started out with glowing prospects and with strong indications of success. There was no trouble to make the products, but to make them at a cost that would enable their sale at a profit seemed to be the big problem.

It pays to keep machines in repair—and that you keep your body in repair, too.

We Want to Talk to Every Prospect Who Plans to Pay More Than $500 for a Car

We want to tell you something about the Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car. Want you to examine it—and to drive it.

Stop in and let us prove what a vast difference there is between the Light-Six and other cars at about the same price—or between the Light-Six and cars of other makes costing several hundred dollars more.

To be able to buy a Six, practically free from vibration, for less than $1,000 is an opportunity not duplicated anywhere in the world. Elimination of vibration adds immeasurably to the life of the motor. It is one of the reasons for the universal high resale value of the Light-Six.

The Touring Car body is all-steel—even to its framework. Seat cushions—of genuine leather—are ten inches deep and are placed at the most restful angle.

The one-piece windshield is handsome and practical because it gives unobstructed view of the road ahead and is rain-proof. The quick-action cowl ventilator and the parking lights are but indications of the quality and completeness of the appointments.

No other make of car ever built, by anyone, at any price, represents so great a dollar-for-dollar value as the Light-Six Touring Car. The savings resulting from large volume, complete manufacture and the fact that Studebaker's overhead is shared by three distinct models make possible its low price and high value.

The Light-Six upholds Studebaker's 71-year reputation for honest value.

WHY YOU ARE WHAT YOU ARE

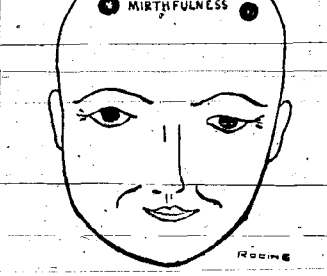

By EDNA PURDY WALSH

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

WHY ALL THE LAUGHS?

The mightiest fun lover cannot help his laughs, and the pleasant little wrinkles around his eyes and face which turn upwards. The source of the mirthfulness, located in the forehead above the outer white of the eye.

Mirthfulness brings an appreciation of humor, and leads to the paths taken by Larry Senon, Eddie Lyons and Harold Lloyd. When you see them next, look for development of the forehead at these points. You will surely find it abundant.

The external angles of the face grow tiny lines from mirthfulness. There are horizontal lines on the nose, at the angles of the eyes and at the corners of the mouth.

His eyes look pleasant or mirthful and in a man who laughs a great deal, there will be curved lines, even in his cheeks.

Well-developed mirthfulness takes one through many difficulties easily. It takes one to the newsmen to buy comic stories. Mirthfulness is a way of remembering these stories, and telling them to others. Love of mischief also springs from this faculty, and when it is well developed the individual always has a history of playing—mischief-makers at school, especially when recreation in the upper hand, at the "carnival" is not lacking.

No clown, wit, humorist or comedian ever lived without mirthfulness.

WHAT MAKES A SUCCESSFUL PUGILIST?

Would you place this man in the Art Institute as a judge of pugilism? Would you place him in the Epworth League?

When the faculties of firmness, aggressiveness, combativeness, justice, honesty and endurance are in the head in a head, how big a line of shape. The individual is in complete harmony in a fighting line. He will be fond of baseball, football, boxing and athletics as well, though great mental development, if it exists, makes those a hobby instead of a profession.

FRANZESS

COMBATIVE-NESS

Just how much time he will devote to these occupations depends on the rest of his head-development. If his intellectual interests are not wide, and his forehead is low, with more of his head below the ears than above it, he will be found at all times in pugilism.

Given, however, a high degree of benevolence, high ideals, and a little imagination, all the fighting instinct would then be directed toward accomplishing good. This situation, so ideal, is not, however, often seen. The soul with the higher faculties developed is not as a rule sufficiently developed in the regions of combativeness and firmness to swing his ideals with pugilistic strength. And the man with a preponderance of destructiveness and firmness lacks the more benevolent qualities.

HOW TO RECOGNIZE JEALOUSY BEFORE IT HURTS YOU

Jealousy is not a faculty that can in itself be located on the head. It is a "by-product" of selfishness and apprehensiveness, and is seen in various contours of the entire body.

Extreme jealousy is first recognized by a projection of the muscle under the lower lip.

A neck very large at the base of the brain—innateness—is its side partner.

"At one place in the road," he relates, "how a house cat in front of me saw a house cat in front of me, but before we got to her a collie rushed from the yard, picked the cat up in his teeth by the nape of her neck and dragged her to safety. Cat and dog were friends, all right, but when we stopped we noticed that the dog seemed to be saying to the cat, reproachfully, 'How many times have I told you to keep out of the road?'—Detroit News.

DAIRY FACTS

Dairy Animals, Help in Country's Meat Supply

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

About 17 per cent of the matured dairy animals in this country find their way to the slaughter and packing plants, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. If this percentage is applied to the number of matured dairy animals reported on farms by the last census, and the average live weight and dressing yields are used in calculating the beef production, the result shows about 1,502,500,000 pounds of carcass beef produced from dairy cattle during the year 1920.

This quantity represents more than 23 per cent of the total beef production of the United States for that year. Probably 50 per cent of all the calves slaughtered are of dairy breeding. If this percentage is applied to the total number of calves slaughtered in 1920 and the resulting figure multiplied by the average live weight and dressing yields, the amount of beef produced by dairy calves is about 550,647,000 pounds for the year 1920.

The principal conditions which cause dairy cows to be discarded for milk production purposes are old age, disease, physical defects, low milk yield, and sterility. Many of the dairy cows and others that are unsuitable as milk producers are fattened for a short period and then sold for beef. When properly fed such cows make rapid gains, although the tendency is to accumulate fat externally and in the body cavities rather than to produce a well-marbled flesh. About 85 per cent of the cow carcasses are graded as common or lower, and the meat is used largely in the preparation of sausage and canned meat.

Bulls that are no longer desired in the herd for various reasons make up a part of the meat from dairy cattle. They are seldom suitable for dressed beef, a large proportion of the rounds, being used for dried or smoked beef and the remaining portions of the carcasses for sausage.

While the quality of beef produced from mature cows and bulls is of lower grade than that of beef produced from young calves, it is not necessarily true with respect to the yield obtained from dairy cows. Probably 95 per cent of the female dairy calves are slaughtered as calves. Most of these animals, if properly handled and slaughtered while young, produce a high grade of beef.

Comfort in Hot Weather—Necessary for Dairy Cow

During the hot summer months dairy high producing cows are largely kept from giving their normal supply of milk by excessiveness of their heat in the summer months.

One of the most common of these is the furnishing of drinking water. A cow in milk requires about 100 pounds, or 12.5 gallons, of water daily, and heavy producing cows frequently double this amount. During hot weather a cow must have the normal supply of water and an added amount necessary for adjusting her supply from normal to hot weather needs.

The question of how often cows should be watered, when they are not kept with a constant supply before them, varies with the condition of the weather, kind of feed, etc. It is safe to say, however, that cows in milk should have water at least three times a day.

Profitable Cow Ought to Produce Much Milk

It is point-of-view by successful dairymen that to be profitable a cow ought to produce at least 5,000 pounds of milk in a year. In producing this quantity of milk, her butterfat would amount to about 200 pounds. In addition to the sale of butterfat, the skimmed milk, the manure, and the calf must be reckoned as of value.

Daily Water Supply Is of Greatest Importance

Cows which produce 25 pounds of milk a day require 75 pounds or more of water daily, and instances are on record in which heavy milkers have consumed more than 300 pounds of water a day. A gallon of water weighs eight pounds.

Young Calves Should Be Fed Good Grain Ration

Young calves should be fed grain as soon as they will eat it. Ground oats, corn chop and wheat-braw, mixed in equal proportions, constitute a good grain ration. Feed twice-daily all calf will clean up, remembering also that calves must have plenty of milk.

Value of Soy Beans

Regarding the value of soy beans for milk cows the Iowa station says that soy beans are worth $30 a ton when oil meal is worth $45.

High Quality Butter

High quality butter is in the greatest demand and it is natural that creamery men should be willing to pay more for the better grades of cream.

Care for Cream on Farm

Cream should be properly cared for on the farm. It should be turned every day and should be sent to market frequently.

National Brand of Butter

There is a growing belief among leading dairymen that a real demand for a national brand of butter can be developed.

HIS IDENTITY IS IN DOUBT

Soldier Patient in Toledo (Ohio) Hospital May Be Martin Lyons or Bert Jordan.

Is Martin Lyons, a patient in the Toledo (O.) hospital for the insane, a soldier of the United States army prior to 1917, or is he the man whose identity he has at times claimed—Bert Jordan, a World War veteran?

This is the question which has puzzled authorities of the American Legion and other agencies for the relief of the ex-servicemen since the man was found wandering about the streets of Toledo two years ago.

As Lyons, he has been identified by the War Department as having served in the army in 1915. Finger prints aided in the establishment of this identification.

When discovered in Toledo he gave the authorities the name of Bert Jordan, said by War department officials to have been an officer of the World War. Cards and letters in the man's clothing bore this name. Since then he has become paralyzed and lost use of voice and hands, but has indicated that his correct name was Martin Lyons. He once claimed California as his home state and when found carried a photograph of a Salt Lake City (Utah) restaurant in his pocket.

Through the agency of the Red Cross it has been determined that such a man was a patient in a Stockton (Calif.) hospital, but was discharged or escaped. He is then thought to have enlisted in the United States army at Alameda, Calif., in 1915, but was dropped a few months later as "mentally deficient."

He is now hopelessly bedridden, due to the paralytic affliction, and is in the Toledo institution, the ward of the women of the American Legion Auxiliary, who believe that he is a World War veteran. The injury which caused his illness is due to a depression of the left side of the skull, but his arm from wrist to elbow shows signs of skin grafting. The man claims this resulted from service in France.

About six feet in height, the man is of splendid physique, weighing in the neighborhood of 180 pounds. He has sandy hair, blue eyes and strong, refined features. When found he stated that he was thirty-three years of age, and indicated since that he has two brothers and two sisters. Any information as to the man's identity or as to his family should be sent to Mrs. P. C. Canard, 1207 East Broadway, Toledo, O., chairman of the hospital committee of the Ohio department of the American Legion Auxiliary.

TO PREVENT AIRPLANE FIRES

John Gose and Others of Committee on Aeronautics Invent Fireproof Gasoline Tank.

Having lost his right leg and suffered severe injuries caused by a burning airplane in the World War, John Henry Gose of Washington, D. C., a member of the American Legion, national committee, on aeronautics, with other aviators, who had received similar injuries, set to work to devise a system to eliminate for others the dangers that caused their own troubles.

The result was the invention of a fireproof gasoline tank, containing a fire-resisting chemical which extinguishes any fire that may start from a leak in the gasoline tank system. Another flask containing acid is installed over the engine of the airplane. This flask releases its acid as soon as a certain temperature has been reached. The invention is built in much the same manner as a thermos flask is constructed.

Mr. Gose entered the service at Fort Myer, Virginia. He served for a time in a battery of field artillery until he obtained a transfer to the aviation service. He received training with the Canadian Royal Flying Corps at Toronto, and completed his course at Hicks, Tex. Commissioned a first lieutenant, he went overseas with the Twenty-second aero squadron. Later he was detached for service with the British Royal Flying Corps. It was while he was with the British that he suffered the accident.

Flying at an altitude of between 500 and 600 feet, a sheet of flame shot from underneath the front gasoline tank of his plane. Lieutenant Gose immediately put the machine into a steep climb to put the flames out and also to make a landing. The plane crashed on one wing and the pilot was pinned in the burning wreckage. Struggling to get free from the blazing plane, he broke both legs in the attempt. Meanwhile the fire was burning around his legs and body. Eventually, comrades, risking their lives, succeeded in pulling the lieutenant from the plane. What was left of his right leg had to be amputated.

"My one thought during the 19 months I was in the hospital was to find a fire-prevention equipment that would save other flyers from my own experience," Lieutenant Gose stated.

An organizer of the American Legion post at Bristol, Va., Lieutenant Gose has been connected with the service organization since the early days of its existence.

The Double Robbery.
The Punxville grocery store had been broken into and robbed.

"It was the work of local thieves, home talent," announced the sheriff, after sleuthing the place over thoroughly. The grocer beamed.

"Well, then," he said, "I got no grudge."

"That's neighborly, but why?" "Oh, tain't so much neighborliness. I guess we're even. Chances are I've been sellin' the guilty parties their groceries."—American Legion Weekly.

He found it in Valparaiso

Then he headed north and found it up near the "jumping-off place"

No matter what part of the world you may find yourself in, few things make you feel more at home than to walk into a store and discover your favorite smoking tobacco for sale.

You get a great thrill from seeing your home newspaper in a strange land and an even greater thrill or meeting someone from the old home town. But tobacco certainly comes next in the order of importance in away-from-home thrills.

With your favorite tobacco in your favorite pipe, life is worth living in almost any corner of the globe.

This thought was inspired by the following interesting letter from Mr. W. E. Bromley, an Edgeworth smoker from Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Larus & Brother Co., Richmond, Va. Gentlemen:

In some of your advertisements from time to time I have noticed letters from different users of Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco and I wondered if anyone ever had a more varied experience than I have.

When in Valparaiso, South America, I could get it; and when I was as far north as a man could get, I could get the "jumping-off place," I could get Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed.

I have an old briar that I have had for ten years and it never had a crumb of any but Edgeworth in it.

If that isn't going some, "you tell me." Yours truly, (Signed) W. E. Bromley.

If Mr. Bromley makes frequent skips from continent to continent, his record of keeping all tobacco but Edgeworth out of his briar is indeed noteworthy.

Although Edgeworth does reach the far corners of the earth, there must be times when the supply runs low in Zanzibar and other remote districts.

But as a rule Edgeworth smokers, wherever they are, generally manage to find a way to get Edgeworth for they are really smoking unless the tobacco comes from a little blue can.

If you are not an Edgeworth smoker but would like an opportunity to find out if you want to be Larus & Brother Company, 76 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

Molly cast an involuntary glance at the opening door, watched it close after the pair of blackguards and hunched herself. The issue was at hand.

Pimmsold slid a bolt on the door, brought over one of the makeshift chairs and placed it in front of Molly, seating himself. His alcohol-laden breath reached her nauseatingly and she turned her head aside. As if a trigger had been released Pimmsold's face became inflamed with a passionate fury.

"Don't you!" he said. "Don't you turn your head away from me. I'll train you to better manners before I'm through with you. You'll be jumping to do what you think I want you to before long. You'll be begging me for favors. You may think you're too good for me now. You won't presently."

She saw that she had gone too far in her disdain; that she must try to leash the devil that had broken loose in his brain.

"Just what do you want?" she asked, and her voice seemed not to belong to her as she uttered the words that showed no tremor.

"You! Not for love, my beauty! Because you are good to look at—yes. But I'll take my time. I'll slip at the dish, my dear. I've got a big score to settle and I'll do it properly. We'll go over some of the items."

He got up and emptied a bottle that still held a generous measure. He staggered slightly and fumbled the chair as he sat down again. Molly watched him intently. If only he got sufficiently drunk. Before the rest came back. Perhaps she could get his own gun? Pimmsold held a familiar finger on her knee and instantly loathing showed in her eyes. He laughed.

"Using that busy little brain of yours, eh? Pimmsold, I'll get drunk. Nothing doing, my dear. I made that booze and I know just how it treats me, huh? Now, then."

"Your guardian angel Sandy chided me out of my share in the Molly mine belongs to me 'count of grub-stakin' your father."

"That's a lie."

"That's easy to say when it nets you a fortune. Easy to go back on a dead man's agreement. Four-flushing Sandy Bourke."

Molly suddenly slipped back into the printing. Something seemed to click and the refinement she had learned and used so far felt like a cloak that is dropped for freedom in battle. With the hair-raising of Sandy and her father she was Molly Casey, daughter of a desert rat, once more.

"That's another d—n lie," she said. "Haven't forgotten how to swear, have you?"

"I've heard how Sandy Bourke chased your rotten-hearted jumper out off the chain and gave you until sunup to sneak out of town. I've heard how you were afraid to look at him through the smoke but went galloping off while the whole camp laughed at you. Sandy a four-flusher! A coyote'll fight when it's cornered, but you."

Pimmsold grew slowly livid. "Heard all about it did you?" he said slowly. "Then you know some of the score. And I can wipe off what I owe Sandy Bourke through you. And there are more items. There was the first time we met. I haven't forgotten that. There was the kiss you said you tried to bite out after you'd burned the doll I gave you. You told about that the next time I kissed you in the hammock at Three Star. You tried to rub out that kiss too. Maybe the next ones will stay put."

"That was the time Mormon man handled you. She saw the blue snakes crawl on his purpling skin, and she kept her eyes on them, though her mental vision was on the holster beneath his vest. She deliberately turned her head to look at him, and he knew her strength. If she could get inside his arms, if even to endure a moment of his beastly embrace, and could get a grip on the gun."

But there was something in Pimmsold that delighted in playing with a victim he felt sure of. It soothed his broken vanity.

"So," he said, "I'm going to get even with Sandy and with Mormon and that bow-legged fool Sam Manning, who call the Mascot of the Three Star, all at once; while I get even with you. And get what should have been mine at the same time. We'll have you tucked away while we mail the letter that will bring your ransom. Never mind the details of handling the money. I'll attend to that. But we'll bleed you dry. The price of all your stock and that of the three suckers at the Three Star at par—and all they can borrow on the ranch—that will be the price for you, my lady. With three days to deliver in."

"You talk like a crazy man, or a drunken one. If you lay a finger on me they'll trail you to hell, Jim Pimmsold, and the devil himself won't stop them from skinning you alive."

Pimmsold shrugged his shoulders, but his eyes flickered and for a second his cowardly soul shrank.

"I'll look out for that," he said, "if you are delivered back to them as damaged goods they'll never know it. I'll tell you that. Maybe you won't be over-anxious to do that." His eyes grew moody, his manner sullen.

He was passing into another alcoholic phase. Molly sensed imminent danger. "I'll take those kisses now," he cried, and lunged for her, catching her about the waist as she rose from the chair. "And more to boot," he added thickly as he drew her to him, one hand at the back of her head, fingers twining in her hair, twisting her face forward, upward. She had both arms inside of his, her hands on his chest. With all her strength she strained and pushed away, her right hand slid up to the holster, groping.

The gun was not there. Pimmsold had reloaded it during the meal and left it on the table. His breath sickened her. She got her arm clear and struck him viciously on the mouth, breaking the lips against his teeth. Fighting like a cave-woman, she scored his cheek with nails that dug deep from the corner of his eyelid and brought the blood. As he shifted his hold she wrenched loose, leaving strands of brown hair in his fingers, and jumped for the door. In her spring she saw, too late, the pistol on the table. She drew the bolt, half opening the door before he caught her and dragged her back again.

"You wouldn't," he panted. "I'll fix you." Like a panther Molly fought, matching her young muscles against his, striking, clawing, biting. Her riding coat ripped, the neck of her waist was torn away. Muddled at her resistance, he struck back. Once he got her about the throat, but her fingers were at his face, tearing at his eyes and he had to beat her off. The fight fought with all the sublimated despair of attacked womanhood, the man like a gorilla. The struggle was unequal, with more than forty pounds in favor of Pimmsold, though if Molly had possessed the pinkest of weapons, she might have won. He held her at last, close to him, one arm wrapped about her, his right hand forcing the heel of the palm under her tucked-in chin, slowly, inexorably forcing it back while his bleeding, discolored face lowered. This time her arms were locked in his, useless. Her knees were futile; she had only her teeth left and she was going to try those. But she knew her strength—she knew—another moment or two she would be the mistress of this brute who, did not know the meaning of the word.

A shadow barred the half-open door, low down. A pointed head appeared with blazing eyes, with a neck-ruff flaring high. White teeth showed as red gums bared in hate, and, forger-ing the wounded leg that had held him back, Grit hurled himself in a staggering but magnificent leap. He could not reach Pimmsold's throat, he had lost much momentum through the damaged leg, he lacked power from loss of blood, but fury gave him strength for the spring that brought his teeth within reach of Pimmsold's right wrist, exposed; the cuff halfway up the forearm. Grit's teeth flashed like chisels, ripping through flesh, tendon and artery, sending jets of blood spurting before Pimmsold, with a yell of surprise and consternation, flung Molly into a corner, dazed and weak, and threw up his left forearm to guard against the dog's second leap.

It fell short. Pimmsold's right hand scattering blood, groped blindly for the gun on the table behind him. He found the barrel and through the heavy butt down with a crash on Grit's head, back of the ear. The dog dropped like a length of chain. Pimmsold kicked the body viciously, taking the handanna from his neck and tying it tight about his wrist, fastening the knots with his teeth. With a look at Molly, crumpled unconscious in the corner, he sought for more liquor.

He found it and poured himself a big jorum, gulping it down while the blood dripped heavily from the bandage. He was soggy with shock and fatigue; the strong stuff half paralyzed his faculties and he dropped into a chair, gazing stupidly at his wrist.

His imagination was a curse to him. He had seen Grit's slaving jaws as they rose in the leap, the crimson glare in his eyes. To all intents the dog was mad. It had been lying wounded in the sun. Only madness could have given it strength to track so far. What if it meant lockjaw—hydrophobia.

Water—that was the test! There was water that Cookie had brought in for coffee, half a bucket, by the stove. He felt a sudden repugnance toward it. The shuddering veins in his wrists burned and throbed as if they were oozing molten lead instead of blood. And he was growing weak. If he didn't get a tourniquet fixed he might bleed to death. But what was the use?

Grit, who had opened a way out for Molly, lay still beneath the table. Molly, overtaken, was in a swoon. Pimmsold sat in a stupor. The door swung wide. Cookie rushed in, his face muddy with alarm.

"The show's gone wrong," he cried to Pimmsold, who stared at him half-comprehending. "For Gawd's sake, what's happened here? Gimme a drink." He snatched at the bottle and swallowed from the neck. "Here, you need a swig. We got to get out of here, pronto. Have you scragged the gel?" He thrust the bottle at Pimmsold, who drank, senses rallying by the urge of danger that emanated from the cook like the sweet stench of a frightened animal.

"Brandon's gang has come back," said Cookie, "it's the d—dest streak of luck. They must have felt in with Wyatt or some of his pals. They must have been to the ranch. They cut off the boys and the horses over by Sand Creek. Reynolds got clear. He saw them comin' an' streaked it. They were shootin' like hell, he said. Hahn and Butch has gone up to the lookout to . . . Hear that?"

That was a single rifle-shot, followed by the others, the last almost as one.

"H—!" cried Pimmsold, "they're on us this end. It's Wyatt. Just my d—d luck for him to meet up with Brandon."

Cookie ran outside and Pimmsold followed to the door, lethargy leaving him in the face of disaster, though he could not think fast or clearly. Hahn came clattering over the rocks on his horse, his face chalky white.

"Go get him a slug of whisky," Pimmsold ordered Cookie.

But Cookie, his face twitching with fright, jumped for his own mount and went galloping down the valley to the south.

Pimmsold sent curses after him, reaching for his own pistol before he remembered it was inside, dragging Hahn's butt out of its holster and then quiting as the fleeing cook tumbled and disappeared behind some timber.

The handkerchief about Pimmsold's wounded wrist was now a sudden rag, but the loss of blood had cleared his brain. He set his left arm about Hahn and helped him into the cabin. Molly was stirring and Pimmsold scowled blackly at her. He gave Hahn a drink.

"Brace up," he said; "what happened? I know about Reynolds. I mean at the lookout."

"We no more than made the lookout," said Hahn, "before six men came riding along, headed for trouble. One of them was the black-headed guy from California, who was here with that Brandon, first time they came nosing around. And another was Wyatt. Wyatt was just starting to point 'em out the entrance when Butch lets him have it. Hits him smack in the forehead. Before he could show 'em the way in. He may have told 'em about it on the way up. But Blackhead must have caught the shine of Butch's barrel. He fires back—they all had their rifles handy 'cross the 'ommel—the bullet goes through the tree and knocks Butch down. Went through both hips. He falls against me and I show in the open, sliding on that d—d slippery boulder, sliding inside and out of range, but they got me."

"They'll be through any minute. Pimmsold, you can't tell how much Wyatt told 'em on the way up. They've got me. I can't ride. My lungs are filling up. Butch is paralyzed—if he ain't dead. A h—l of a wind-up! You can make it out the way Reynolds did. None of the gang that left with Wyatt knows about the side-trail by Spur rock. But you'd better beat it. Me, I've turned my last card. The case is empty!"

His head fell forward onto his arms. A trickle of scarlet came from the corner of his mouth. Pimmsold looked at him calculatingly. Hahn could not ride. But he wouldn't die for a while. To leave him here where the raiders would find him might mean a confession wrung from him that would tell of the get-away trail by Spur rock and Nipple peaks. He shook Hahn by the sound shoulder.

"Brace up," he said. "You can hide in Split Rock cave. I'm going to put the girl in there. Take another drink. Pick up some grub. There's water in the cave. You can come out soon's the coast is clear."

"I'll not be coming out," said Hahn huskily. "But it's a good move." He

Something Like Oysters.

Grim fossil oyster shells, said by geologists to be from the Cretaceous period, and some of them measuring more than three feet in length, have been discovered in a clay bank in Starr county, Texas, near a petrified forest.

The fossils were found in a clay and shell bank about 1,000 feet above sea level. Some of the specimens have been sent to the Smithsonian institution and others to the public health service.

Near the fossil bank are hundreds of petrified trees, some of them four feet in diameter. In this forest is a variety of oak now extinct in this part of the country.

Misplaced Credit.

Too often a lawyer gets more credit for freeing a guilty man than the prosecuting attorney gets for convicting a criminal.

Good posture is that posture of the body which best helps man to do his work day in and day out with no useless expenditure of energy, but with the best advantage to the action of the heart and lungs and all the rest of the organs of the body. Good posture is for a lifetime. Life is a test of endurance. Its length depends upon the ability of the internal organs to keep on working and to keep on working together.

Good posture must first favor the good working of the bodily organs. And it must do this at the least expense in effort, which, it must be remembered, costs a certain amount of organic labor to maintain.

Good posture shows vitality. Just as good posture helps vitality. We know it when we see it, because we feel the weakly collected the bottle, some scraps of food.

Pimmsold stooped over Molly, coming out of her faint, and gazed at her with her own scarf as her eyes opened and looked at him. He took off her belt and strapped her arms behind her back. Then, despite his wounded wrist, he lifted her easily enough and strode with her out of the door, Hahn following.

Hahn's horse was standing there obediently with pendent reins anchoring it! Blaze and Pimmsold's black were nipping grass in the little corral where they had been placed. Blaze whinnied at the sight, or the scent, of his mistress. Pimmsold turned into a cleft, stopping at a rock whose almost flat surface was level with his feet. A great mass of granite that some freak of weathering or convulsion of earthquake had split almost in half. Into the crevice a wild grape-vine had twined, and died.

"Can you make it, Hahn?" he asked. The dealer nodded and knelt, using his sound arm to aid himself by the tough fliers, bracing with his knees. Hahn, some ten feet in the crack he looked up, his ghastly face pallid in the shadow, with an attempt at a grin.

"Goodbye, Pimmsold," he said. "Good luck! What do I do with the girl?" "Keep her from calling out. She's gagged but she might try it. Make her nurse you. Do anything you d—n please with her!"

Hahn dropped out of sight. Pimmsold did not wait, but picked Molly up from where he had deposited her, a helpless bundle, on the rock.

"The bottom's soft down there," he said. "Sand. It ain't more than six feet. Down you go, you bet! They'll have a fine time locating you. And you've got a dying man for company. He'll be a dead one before morning."

He lowered her, feet down, released her and watched her disappear. He swung about and ran back to the corral, his hurt arm throbbing with his exertion. He flung himself into the saddle of the black horse, once leader of a sleek herd of wild mustangs, magnificent for speed and symmetry, worthy, a better master, and galloped out of the corral, out of the side-ravine, into the open park. The rough-towed about his arm was becoming soaked. Every jump of the black horse, seemed to increase the blood-letting. The spout of fetid steam energy that had carried him through since the arrival of Cookie was dying away.

But he was on a mount that none could match. He was going on a trail that was hard to follow, practically unknown. Unless he was headed off he could break through. At Nipple peaks he could rest, attend to his wound.

A shot, a bullet whistling past that nicked the stallion's ear and sent him plunging and bucking, warned him that his enemies had found the way he and were after him. He did not look back, but bent forward in his saddle and sunk his spurs into the black's flanks. The half-trained mustang's instinctive bounds sprang the aim of the marksmen; and, though the steel-headed missiles hummed like bees about them, they gained the shelter of the same trees that had covered Cookie. Belly almost to ground, the black swept over the crumpled turf at racing speed, the drum of his hoofs like distant thunder, crest high, crimson satin nostrils flaring, mad at the sting of the red notch in his ear.

Round the elbow of the Hideout, with Brandon's men distanced, into the gorge at the south end. A wild scramble up a steep slope—and the way to Spur rock was clear. Pimmsold smiled grimly. "D—n them, I'll beat them yet!" For a second he was silhouetted against a sky-line, then he plunged down. Fresh droppings told him that Reynolds had won clear. He was safe from pursuit. If the wound he should have cauterized it. But

He reined in for a moment. The sound of a shout rang in his ears. It was an echo, he fancied, it must be an echo, flung back from the mountain walls ahead. But it could mean nothing else than a view-halloo. Some one had glimpsed him disappearing beyond the ridge.

DIVERSIONS OF THE ROMANS—CARRIES ITS SUPPLY OF OIL

Sporting Men Used Quail as Well as Fish Equipped by Nature for Swift Race It Has to Make Up Cold Yukon Waters.

The Romans used quails as well as cocks for fighting. Quail combats were well-known among the ancients, and especially at Athens. The Chinese have been always extremely fond of quail-fighting, as appears from many accounts of those people. The Sumatrans likewise use the birds in the manner of gamecocks.

Cocks and quail, fitted for the purpose of engaging one another to the last gasp for diversion are frequently compared by the Roman writers to gladiators, remarks the Detroit News.

A circle was made in which the birds were placed, and the quail was driven out of the circle by the stake, which was sometimes money, and occasionally the quail themselves. Another practice was to produce one of the birds, which being first filled with the middle finger, a feather was then plucked from its head. If the quail bore this operation without flinching, his master gained the stake, but just as the bird ran away.

A fish equipped with a special oil supply for a swift race up the cold Yukon river has been reported by Dr. C. H. Gilbert to the United States bureau of fisheries. The reason why this fish has this special oil supply is that it must maintain a speed from three to five times that of the salmon in other rivers, due to the fact that the season is very short, and that the spawning grounds are between 2,000 and 3,000 miles from the mouth of the river.

The Yukon salmon, fish of considerable size, is similarly supplied with a special store of oil. Known generally as a species that spawns exclusively in the lower courses of streams, often scarcely above the reach of the tides and never far from salt water, in the Yukon it shows a remarkable reversal of habit, and under the spur of necessity rushes up the river 2,000 miles or more to the spawning grounds at a speed averaging 50 miles a day.

The other afternoon a young American rented an airplane at the Bourgeois hotel which he will utilize, he declares, to scatter handbills all over Paris, says Le Petit Parisien. A sample of these handbills reads as follows:

"An American, for the first time in Paris, would like to lunch at noon next Tuesday with the most interesting anarchist in the capital; Wednesday, with a graduate student of art or music; Thursday, with an actress; Friday, with some lady who intends to commit suicide; and Saturday, with a modernist."

In exchange for this entertainment he offers the luncheon, music and incense conversation.

The address of an American advertising agency follows, and then the name of this original visitor—Colonel P. Tompkins.

INCOME TAX WORK COSTLY

Collection for Each Fiscal Year Have Cost $1.30 for Each $100 Paid to Government.

To handle efficiently the collection of income taxes among one hundred million people is a problem that cannot be worked out overnight but now, after nine years, a comparatively smooth-running, well-organized machine has been developed.

The internal revenue bureau in Washington annually receives one and a quarter million income tax returns. This figure does not include the returns filed by those whose incomes are less than $5,000. To audit and carry on the work of this department of the bureau, 7,275 persons were employed in Washington during the last fiscal year.

The cost of administering the internal revenue laws was $41,777,744.90. Total receipts were $3,197,451,083. Computing on this basis the cost of collection was $1.30 for each $100 collected, compared with 87 cents for the preceding year. The difference in relative cost of collection is due mainly to the large reduction in revenues, the repeal of some of the war profits taxes, and the increase in individual exemption.—Saturday Evening Post.

"Well," said Robert, "he is a fine dog, his sense is a lot bigger than his size."

CHAUTAUQUA IS GOING STRONG

LARGE CROWDS ATTEND AFTERNOON AND NIGHT PROGRAMS.

Grayling Post to Clear About $100 on Affair.

The Traverse-Norton chautauqua began a three day program here Tuesday afternoon, the opening attraction being Landis Orchestra, which rendered a fine musical program; and U. G. Lacey, lecturer. In the evening the programs were by the same persons with a change in subjects.

Wednesday the Herrod Jubilee Singers were the big card, together with Ask Davis, a cartoonist of more than average ability. Both afternoon and evening programs were well received.

Today is the closing time and is to be featured by an afternoon and evening drama the latter being entitled "A pair of sixes." Josh Leo, actor, teller, mimic, impersonator, humorist, speaker and all around funny man is also one of the attractions.

All the numbers have given splendid satisfaction. Back of the guarantors of the contract, the members of Grayling American Legion have been boosting the ticket sale and before the doors opened a the first performance enough season tickets had been sold to pay the cost of the Chautauqua. Over that amount the Legion was to receive half the net proceeds. There are a few local expenses also that have to be paid for by the Legion; however it is estimated that the service men should clear at least $100.

The big burden for the success of the undertaking has been upon their shoulders and they have done well. They, and the contract signers before them, have made it possible for the people of Grayling and surrounding country to enjoy three days of good music, fun, literature, art and lectures, all of a high quality and at a small expense.

Everything has passed off nicely; the weather has been ideal and every one has a Chautauqua mood and excitement for an excess of pesky mosquitoes in the evening, attracted there from the nearby swamps by the bright lights, all was about perfect.

Already a contract for next year's Chautauqua is under way of being signed up and no doubt that before the evening program is finished, the contract will be complete.

Michigan Happenings

John Baird, director of the Conservation department, has been advised that the federal government has turned over to the state 35 full sections of land in Isosco county for a state game refuge. The land is within the federal government's forest preserve, located near Tawas and for years has been one of the chief breeding grounds for birds and animals in the state.

John Baird, director of conservation, has asked the state administrative board for permission to improve the state fish hatcheries by providing ponds suitable for raising spawn. The plan back of the request is that the state may develop Michigan spawn and plant the lakes and streams with home grown fish. At present most of the spawn used by the conservation department is purchased from eastern markets. The request is being considered by an administrative board committee.

John Carmon, 54 years old, and William Carmon, 56 years old, of Ypsilanti, were killed instantly when hit by a fast passenger train running west. The two men were on their way to go fishing together with a nephew, Roy Hubbard, walking west on the Michigan Central tracks. They noticed a freight train coming east and failed to hear the fast train running west on the tracks on which they were walking.

Three employees of the Marquette County Road commission were drowned, one and one-half miles west of Champlain, when the truck in which they were riding crashed through a fence and turning over in a pond of water four feet in depth. The driver lost control of the truck when a mouse jumped upon the shoulder of one of the men in the front seat who frightened, jostled the driver, causing him to let go of the wheel.

Max Luedemann, 45 years old, a section man, was killed instantly when he came in contact with the third rail on the Michigan railway line near the Bath mills crossing, three miles east of Albion. Luedemann was engaged in putting in a new tie and is thought to have touched the rail. His body then fell over the other two rails and 600 volts of electricity passed through his body.

State employees have begun searching for thousands of dollars worth of road machinery that in the last two or three years has been rented out to road contractors by the highway department. While much of the machinery has been turned back to the state, there is a vast amount of it that cannot be located according to the check of state road property made at the Charlotte supply station.

William Meers, of Kalamazoo, a veteran of the twenty-fifth Michigan volunteer infantry returned from Tebbas Bend, Ky., where 60 years ago he participated in one of the fiercest battles of the Civil war and where last week he met Mrs. Anna Shubin, whom, when she was a girl nine years old, he saved from death during the fighting.

Twenty-seven employees of the state department have been released, according to an announcement by Charles Deland, secretary of state. Most of them were typists, but one accountant in the corporation division was included. Dismissal of these employees was said to be due to a decrease in the work of the motor vehicle division.

A request for the release of part of the Michigan Agricultural college appropriation for immediate use was received by the state administrative board from the state board of agriculture. It asked $150,000 for a power house, $50,000 for the purchase of farm land and $35,000 for greenhouses. The request was referred to committee.

Miss Bina M. West, of Port Huron, will be Michigan's woman member of the associate national committee under the plan recently established by Republican party leaders.

Derk J. Butti, 84 years old, who has lived at Muskegon 36 years, died here last week. He was born in the Netherlands.

M. A. Cochran, has been retained by the state to act as state superintendent of highway construction, it was announced by Governor Groesbeck. He will have direct charge of all road projects built by the state.

Only nine votes were cast at the school district election at Ionia last week although the district has a budget of $140,000 and a building fund of $270,000. A school janitor, two board members and six members of the election board voted.

The tourist season in upper Michigan is just getting into swing. The car ferry at Mackinac City is carrying an average of 160 cars a day across the straits to the Upper Peninsula, and it is estimated the number will exceed 15,000 this season. Last year the total was 9,000.

The northern Michigan canning factories around Traverse City are handling the first pickings of the cherry crop. Only a few cherries are coming in yet, but the season is not fairly under way.

Bids to cherry-growers by commercial canning companies range from three and one-half cents to five cents a pound, according to A. R. Todd, secretary of the Michigan Canners' association, of Grand Rapids. In a few instances bids of three cents have been made, but these were for less desirable varieties. The unprecedented lack of demand for canned fruits is responsible for the poor offerings, the canned goods market having been weak since January 1. In the cases in which five cents have been offered the canning companies already have contracted their packs.

The annual report prepared by Captain William Brockless, of the Saginaw fire department, statistician of the Michigan State Fireman's association, for submission to the firemen's convention in South Haven shows that in 88 cities in Michigan, including practically all the important cities, there were 14,643 alarms and 12,414 actual fires during the year ending May 31, 1923. Corn, beans, alfalfa, apples, peaches and grapes showed an especially encouraging improvement during June.

BRITAIN SEES GERMAN RUIN

PREMIER BALDWIN BITTERLY ATTACKS OCCUPATION OF RUHR

WORLD'S PEACE UP TO FRANCE

England Hints She Will Treat With Teutons Without Allied Aid on Reparations.

London—Premier Stanley Baldwin, in his statement of the British reparations policy in the house of commons Thursday—contrary to general expectations, bitterly assailed France whose course he charged, "endangered the peace of the world."

As a result of that course, the Premier inferred, Germany "appears to be rapidly moving towards economic chaos and recovery of her credit and her consequent ability to pay her debts appears to be receding into the dim distance."

Great Britain will draft a reply to the latest German note on reparations, and submit it to the allied powers for their approval, he announced.

"If they do not England will be forced to act independently."

England has never wavered, Baldwin said, in her determination that Germany should pay.

"We are as determined as any of our allies that Germany should make reparations for damages of the great war to her fullest capacity."

"But," he said, "we are convinced that measures which will result in the ruin of Germany will be fatal to England, her allies and the whole of Europe."

The occupation of Germany has not had beneficial results, Baldwin said. "The allies are obtaining less towards reparations payments now than before the occupation of the Ruhr," he declared.

"And the reparations they are receiving are exacted at a price of growing dislocation of the German economic system and the probable collapse of that system."

The Premier pointed out that England had never agreed that the occupation would secure the desired payments and had suggested other alternatives.

"We are convinced that the present state of affairs is fraught with grave peril," he declared.

YANK DEMANDS HIT TURK PACT

Allies Angered as U. S. Envoys Fight for "Open Door."

Lausanne—The fight of America to maintain an open door to Turkey is threatening to break up the Turkish peace conference, now on its seventh day.

Minister Grey's eloquent hour in intervention against an obscure French railway concession and an obscure British oil concession, both of which are monopolistic in their effect, being legalized by the allied peace treaty has thrown consternation into the allied camps.

As Ismet Pasha withdrew his acceptance of the concessions proffered after receiving Mr. Grey's support, the allied delegates are blaming the American side of talking of returning home.

The French and British foreign offices are angry at the American intervention and are extremely exchanging notes.

The oil and railway concessions in British and French hands would practically shut out America in the development of Turkey.

INJUNCTION IS MADE LASTING

Employers Permanently Restrained From Interference With Roads.

Chicago—Four hundred thousand employees and officers of the railway shop crafts unions who went on strike a year ago in protest against a United States Labor board decision were permanently restrained from interference in any way with the operation of railroads in what is considered the most sweeping permanent injunction ever granted.

The final decree which makes permanent a temporary injunction granted the federal government October 5, 1922, upon application by Attorney General Daugherty was entered by Judge James H. Wilkerson in the United States district court. The defendant unions, which comprise the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor, were given 60 days to file an appeal.

In entering the decree, Judge Wilkerson said that the evidence showed beyond doubt that it was part of the purpose of those engaged in this combination to carry on the strike by assaults and acts of violence."

He then cited numerous acts of violence and noted that damage to the roads during the strike, according to the evidence, was more than $50,000,000.

Referring to the contention of the unions that the temporary injunction was in interference with free speech, Judge Wilkerson declared it a "misdeed" to characterize any of the acts of the defendants as peaceful.

On September 1, 1922, two months after the calling of the strike, Attorney General Daugherty appeared unexpectedly in federal court in Chicago and sought the injunction which was made final in Judge Wilkerson's decree.

Peg Leg Bossy of Lima, Ohio

When old Bossy lost her right foreleg, amputated because of an infection, her owner, Dr. H. F. Taylor, a veterinary surgeon of Lima, Ohio, decided that a mere missing foreleg shouldn't cause him to destroy an otherwise perfectly serviceable cow. So he rigged up an artificial limb and now Bossy stumps around quite handsomely on her peg leg.

HYPNOTISM

The terms hypnotism, mesmerism, and animal magnetism have been variously applied to designate a mysterious force emanating from one individual, and inducing in another person peculiar nervous conditions in which the body and mind are supposed to be influenced. The phenomena of animal magnetism were supposed to be due to some kind of magnetic force or influence peculiar to living beings, and analogous to the action of a magnet upon steel. The name mesmerism was given to the phenomena in honor of one of the earliest investigators, F. A. Mesmer, a German physician.

Valuable Imitation Pearls.

The number of false jewels manufactured, is enormous, and among these imitations none have ever been more perfect than so-called Venetian pearls. Their manufacture is a lost art, the secret having died with the inventor, a poor Venetian, and it was not until after his death that their beauty and value were recognized. There are said to be no more than ten or twelve thousand in existence. They are very hard, their luster is perfect, and they now command a price almost equal to that of the gem produced by the oyster.

Nothing Ever Certain.

Facial Blemishes

Salad, muddy, roughened or blotched complexions are usually due to constipation.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Carrying the Load. The recent publicity given goods at the university has caused quite a lot of apparently "fugue-twisted" comments from the goods themselves. For instance, in substance, the following is a conversation between two of the fair daisies: "Well, what do you think of the scandal that they are shooting at us about getting parties?" "Oh, good. I have passed it up as a huge joke." "Why, sure, that's all it is. Why should they accuse all of them by actions of a few of us?"—Columbus Dispatch.

Her Only Flight Through Air. Little Nellie's mother was entertaining a famous aviator. After he had finished a thrilling story, little daughter sighed deeply and said: "I've clear forgot how I feels to sail through the air." "Why, Nellie," said her mother in a shocked voice, "you were never in the air in your life." "Gracious, mamma! Have you forgotten that the stork brought me?"—Everybody's Magazine.

These Days. "Dearest, you are the light of my heart, the soul of my life. You are the only woman I ever loved." "Darling, you are the best man on earth. And now that we've tied to each other, let's pretend we're awfully happy?"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.
